

Ethical Guides Now Available as eBooks

The first selection of 50 titles from New Internationalist Publications is now available on dawsonera.

New Internationalist Publications is a company wholly owned by the New Internationalist Trust whose origins lie in a cooperative founded and sponsored in the 1970's by Oxfam, Christian Aid and two Quaker charities.

Self sufficient, and operating independently, this publisher still adheres to its original ethical principles. Its monthly magazine has flourished and sustains a healthy circulation of 75,000 leading to a significant spin-off book publishing programme in related areas. 50 titles are now available on dawsonera.

With a focus on all aspects of equality and fairness among peoples and societies across the globe, New Internationalist covers important and topical subjects such as poverty, justice, sustainability, globalisation, fair trade, food production, women's rights, and conflict resolution.

Noted for their inexpensive "No Nonsense Guides..." and for their committed and knowledgeable authors, New Internationalist provides useful texts recommended for any student following courses on world affairs or citizenship.
